Everybody’s Calling is a hopeful track by The Fortune tellerz that shines with a 1960s / 1970s pop-rock approach. Charismatic vocals blend nicely with bouncy keys and guitars with just the lightest hint of distortion. The lyrical content of Everybody’s Calling is similarly happy, providing listeners with a sense that things will be better. The guitar and synth section that start at around the three-minute mark build up the dramatic tension nicely, to provide just that little bit of oomph for the single’s final minute. Everybody’s Calling is a track that is absolutely needed for the depressing 2020 that so many of us have had.
